Toint Meeting of Vermont Bird Club and Vermont Botanical Club.

The twenty-second annual winter meeting of the Vermont Botanical club and the fifteenth of the Vermont Bird club will be held in Burlington, Friday and Saturday, Jan. 26 and 27, Williams science hall, University of Vermont. The first session will open at 10:30 a.m. on Friday, and the meetings will continue through Friday afternoon, evening and Saturday forenoon. The details as to adustment between the sessions of the Botanical and Bird sections will be arranged as heretofore according to the number and nature of the papers offered. The usual supper will be given complimentary to visiting members and will be followed by an address by some speaker; subject to be announced later.

The committee on publication wish to make the urgent request that all members who have papers at the winter meeting bring with them digests of the same as well as the full text of the papers. A digest made by the writer is always more satisfactory to him than one made by someone else and besides, he can "boil down" his ideas the more intelligently. If this request is complied with it will greatly help the committee in its effort to get out the bulletin early. The fall season, while the botanical trips of the past year are fresh in mind, is the best season, while the botanical trips of the past year are fresh in mind, is the best time to get together material for the bulletin and the committee will gladly receive contributions for the bulletin at any time. It is hoped that the "Botanical and Bird Notes" department will be even larger in the next number.

The advastage is evident of making final decision at the winter meeting as to the place and date of the summer meeting. Careful consideration and timely suggestions are therefore invited relating to this.
